

This is John's intended journey. An idea for this is to get this up on your Smartboard then tape a large sheet of paper over the top and trace the outline of Africa AND the outlines of the countries AND the route he will take. Your new large map could then be displayed on a wall in the corridor so that children can follow John's progress with a large arrow and the biker (found on the next page)

Ideas for a moveable cyclist to add to your wall display:

Look for a free images of a cyclist and cut around it. Or, this is a picture of John just before he headed off from Cairo at the start of his journey.
Have an arrow you can move each week so that the children can see clearly how he is getting on with his 5400 mile journey
